It is difficult to compile a clear and comprehensive list of governors for the colonial period because of the governmental and administrative changes made in England, and due to the proxy system whereby the person bearing the title of Governor often resided in England while a deputy resided in the colony. During the exploration or pre-colonization period, the territory that became Virginia was directly under the crown. Under the charter granted to the London Company, the early government of Virginia was a company appointed council and president, often spoken of as governor. The first man ever to have the title "governor" was Lord Delaware, appointed in 1609. When the London Company lost its charter in 1624, Virginia became a royal colony, and the governor was appointed by the crown. Those appointed to the position often resided in England and were represented in Virginia by deputies. During this period Virginia still remained a resident council and if the governor or deputy governor was absent from the colony the president of the council served as acting governor. There was a break in royal control after the Civil War in England when Parliament allowed the colony to be almost completely self governed. From 1652 to 1660 the General Assembly elected four Governors. Royal authority was restored in 1660, and from that date until the American Revolution in 1776 the Governors were appointed by the crown.

After the colony declared independence, a constitution was adopted which provided for the election of the governor by the General Assembly for a one-year term. A governor could be reelected to serve a total of three consecutive years. He could be reelected again only after a break in service. From 1776 to 1852 the governor was chosen by the state legislature. When the office became vacant by death or resignation, the senior member of the Council of the State acted as governor until the Assembly was able to choose a successor. The Constitution of 1851 abolished the Council of State and provided for the popular election of the Governor for a four-year term. With the exception of the Reconstruction period 1865-1869, when provisional governors were designated by federal authorities, the governor has been elected by popular vote since 1852.

Information on Virginia Governors was obtained from A Hornbook of Virginia History, third edition, Edited by Emily J. Salmon, 1983.

REPORT OF THE SECRETARY OF THE COMMONWEALTH

Why is Virginia a Commonwealth?

Virginia was first known as a Commonwealth in the period between the execution of Charles I in 1649 and the restoration of the monarchy under Charles II in 1660. This period was referred to as the Interregnum ("between reigns"). During this time Oliver Cromwell was Lord Protector of England. (He refused to take the title "King"). Under his leadership, the colony of Virginia enjoyed greater freedom in self-government than it had before. After Cromwell's death in 1658 his son tried but failed to continue his father's legacy. The British Parliament reconvened and restored the monarchy. Charles II took the throne and once again the colonies were under a firm British rule.

Britain's thirteen colonies broke ties with the Crown in the American Revolution and the first Constitution of Virginia was adopted on June 29, 1776. The delegates at the Williamsburg convention decided to name their new form of government the Commonwealth of Virginia, probably in deference to the rebellion against the Crown and the relative freedom they had enjoyed as a colony over one hundred years before during the Interregnum.

Massachusetts and Pennsylvania also chose to adopt the name Commonwealth following the War of Independence. Kentucky, which was once part of Virginia, kept the name Commonwealth when it joined the Union as the 15th state in 1792.

Virginia's Constitution states "Government is, or ought to be, instituted for the common benefit, protection, and security of the people..." and "That all power is vested in, and consequently derived from, the people..." These statements are the foundation and heart of the meaning of the "Commonwealth of Virginia." The citizens of Virginia are encouraged to have direct participation in their own government. One of the most important duties of the Secretary of the Commonwealth is to foster this inclusion by assisting the Governor in appointing Virginians from all walks of life and all corners of Virginia to serve on our many boards and commissions. This enables the public to have direct input to the policies and activities of each and every agency. Every Governor is bound to honor the Constitution by encouraging all citizens to actively and directly participate in Virginia's government.
